Dylan H. Roby, PhD
Director, Health Economics and Evaluation Research Program
Assistant Professor of Health Policy & Management,
UCLA Fielding School of Public Health

Dylan H. Roby, PhD, is the director of the Health Economics and Evaluation Research Program at the UCLA Center for Health Policy Research. He is also an assistant professor in the Department of Health Policy and Management in the UCLA Fielding School of Public Health. Roby is currently working on a study of limited English proficient HMO enrollees for the Office of the Patient Advocate, as well as a study predicting the impact of health reform on California's population with the UC Berkeley Center for Labor Research and Education. He is also working on several projects evaluating state programs, including a long-term evaluation of California's Low Income Health Program. He also conducts data analyses and policy research related to hospital financing, health insurance affordability, workers' compensation, chronic care management, managed care and provision of care to the uninsured. In addition to his research, Roby teaches American Political Institutions and Health Policy (HPM 286) and Introduction to Health Services (HPM 100) in the UCLA Fielding School of Public Health.

Roby served as the associate director of the MPH Program from 2010-2012. Prior to becoming the director of Health Economics and Evaluation Research, he was a senior researcher at the Center from 2003 to 2011. Before returning to UCLA, Roby worked for four years as a senior research associate at The George Washington University Center for Health Services Research and Policy. He worked on safety net issues, including data analysis and research on community health centers and public hospitals. During his time in Washington, DC, he also worked for the National Association of Community Health Centers, the National Governors' Association's Center for Best Practices, and the Progressive Policy Institute. Roby was also an instructor at The George Washington University Department of Health Policy. Prior to that, he was a research assistant at the UCLA Center for Health Policy Research.

Roby graduated from UCLA with a bachelor's degree in geography and a minor in public policy. He earned his doctoral degree in public policy from The George Washington University.
