The Long Awaited Song Filled Movie Inspired by Unsolved 1990 Oakland Car-bombing of legendary Earth Firsters; First Amendment Lawsuit Against FBI & OPD; and Successful Redwood Campaign.

Judi Bari may have passed away in 1997, but 15 years after her death a 93-minute documentary Who Bombed Judi Bari?, produced by her eco-cohort Darryl Cherney.

Directed by Mary Liz Thomson, the movie was created entirely from archival footage including Bari's inspirational speeches, colorful and daring redwood protests, a musical appearance by Bonnie Raitt, and a tribute to Bari by Jerry Brown.

The film's world premiere in San Francisco and other Northern California screenings have been selling out. Sound work was completed at Skywalker Sound where the preview received a standing ovation.

Early praise comes from Ed Asner, who said the movie "transcends politics and will be appreciated as a well-told story and parable." Actor Peter Coyote remarked, "This film is a graphic, factual display of criminality on the part of police in the service of big business. It got me angry, it made me sad, but above all it made me laugh like hell." Adds Producer Darryl Cherney, "Before Occupy Wall Street, there was Redwood Summer."
