WATER - PROTECTING OUR MOST ESSENTIAL RESOURCE

Wednesday May 25, 2011 7:00 P.M- 8:30 P.M.

Thousand Oaks Library

1401 E. Janss Road EMP v.3.0.0.r426652_426614_1

The United Nations says that by the year 2030, two-thirds of the world will lack access to clean drinking water.

Is water a basic human right? Is water a commodity to be bought and sold for profit subject to supply and demand?

Is bottled water more pure and safer than drinking water from your kitchen tap?

Are plastic bottles potentially hazardous to our health because of their chemical composition?

Join us for an evening with Renee Maas, who will discuss everything you ever wanted to know about water from aspects of health and comfort to our National Security. Ms. Maas is Senior Organizer at Food and Water Watch, Los Angeles. Food and Water Watch is a “public interest organization dedicated to ensuring the food and water we consume is safe, accessible and sustainably produced.” They have offices across the United States and in Belgium.

A question and answer period will follow the presentation.

The program is free and open to the public.
